1. Which skills are required for Six Sigma team leaders to be effective?

☐ Process analysis

☐ Problem-solving

☒ All of the above

☐ Team facilitation

✔ Correct

Correct. All teams should be trained in the process-analysis and problem-solving techniques used by the DMAIC model, as well as the Six Sigma philosophy as a whole. Lean concepts are also important for teams, especially those who are tasked with reducing waste. Because of its emphasis on objective, fact-based decisions, effective data analysis is an important skill for Six Sigma teams. Team leaders must also be knowledgeable of team facilitation skills including how to hold effective team meetings.

2. _____ is the deliberate manipulation of information to make it appear more favorable to the receiver.

☐ Inadequate formal communication

☐ Feedback

☐ Selective perception

☒ Filtering

✔ Correct

Correct. Filtering is the deliberate manipulation of information to make it appear more favorable to the receiver, and it's common in communications with people in higher power positions or people we don't want to upset or anger.

3. It's usually a good idea to delay important or complex communications until times when the message receiver is less emotional.

☒ True.

☐ False

✔ Correct

Correct. Emotions, whether good or bad, happy or sad, excited or bored, can influence how a message is interpreted, so it's usually a good idea to delay important or complex communications until times when the message receiver is less emotional.

5. Which of the following are potential sources on conflict on Six Sigma teams?

☐ Lack of clarity in the team's objectives

☐ Differing views of the problem

☒ All of the above

☐ Personality clashes

✔ Correct

Correct. A lack of clarity in the team's objectives, differing views of the problem, and personality clashes can all be a source of conflict on teams.

6. In which conflict handling style do people on one side of a conflict give in to the other side?

☒ Accommodation

☐ Forcing

☐ Compromise

☐ Collaboration

✔ Correct

Correct. Accommodation occurs when people on one side of a conflict give in to the other side. It is suitable when an issue is more important to one side than the other and giving in will not negatively affect the final outcome.

7. Which conflict handling style is usually most appropriate when quick decisions are needed and one side of the conflict has information that the other side lacks, which can result in a negative outcome if not considered?

☐ Accommodation

☐ None of the above

☒ Forcing

☐ Collaboration

✔ Correct

Correct. On the other hand, Forcing (or Dominating) involves the side with more power forcing their position on the other side. While this may sound like a hostile approach, it is often appropriate when quick decisions are needed, or one side has information or knowledge that the other side lacks and not forcing the decision could result in a negative outcome.
